

Customer Story

We had the pleasure of chatting with Chris about his love for racing and his new Turatello F20 enclosed trailer. He started going to races when he was 13 and he has been racing himself since he was 18.

Chris is a structural engineer and chartered building engineer based in the East Midlands. He describes a time when there were silencers on racing cars and growing up to be a bit of a daredevil. For instance, he loves deep sea diving and hill climbing. But he doesn't do roller coasters and parachutes so he is not a daredevil all the way!

With a recent move to a new house, Chris needed a place to keep his Peugeot 306 GTI-6 nice and clean. Fortunately for him, his wife, Jackie is great with spreadsheets (she's a Project Manager!) and she also has a love for cars (he's a lucky guy!).

“ Although the Turatello F20 seemed expensive at first, when we looked at the features and benefits, it was not expensive for the value it provided.”

She conducted some research into enclosed car trailers, focusing on key features which they needed such as insulation, internal / external dimensions and weight capacity. Chris notes:

“Although the TuratelloF20 seemed expensive at first, when we looked at the features and benefits, it was not expensive for the value it provided”.

He explained that he was particularly impressed with the build quality from Turatello trailers in comparison to everything else on the market. And the big bonus is he saved over £5,000 compared to if he had built a new garage for his car!

Here are some benefits of the Turatello solution that Chris highlighted:

Insulated Enclosure for humidity controlled long term storage

Timeless Italian design with an innovative chassis for a more stable towing experience.

Chris got the opportunity to chat to other Turatello owners to allow him to make an unbiased assessment of the trailers. He is very pleased with his new trailer that now stores his 1,000-kg race car, keeping it nice and clean.

Congratulations to Chris on his new premium enclosed trailer purchase from Turatello Trailers UK!
